“Intensely readable. . . . More than a few readers may feel a sudden urge to rush out to a nearby mound or midden, with spade and trowel in hand.”
—James Romm, Wall Street Journal

Three Stones Make a Wall

Three Stones Make a Wall traces the history of archaeology from an amateur pursuit to the cutting-edge science it is today by taking the reader on a tour of major archaeological sites and discoveries, from Pompeii to Petra, Troy to the Terracotta Warriors, and Mycenae to Megiddo and Masada. Along the way, the book addresses the questions archaeologists are asked most often: How do you know where to dig? How are excavations actually done? Who gets to keep what is found? This is a lively and essential introduction to the story of archaeology.

ERIC H. CLINE is professor of classics and anthropology and director of the Capitol Archaeological Institute at George Washington University.

“It is a work of remarkable depth and scope, the consummate achievement of decades of research and collecting, analyzing, and classifying the literary memorializations of Greek and Roman oral narrative fiction.”

The Book of Greek and Roman Folktales, Legends and Myths

Captured centaurs and satyrs, men who give birth, and a woman who remembers too much—these are just some of the colorful characters who feature in the unforgettable stories that ancient Greeks and Romans told in their daily lives. Together they created an incredibly rich body of popular oral stories that include, but range well beyond, mythology. This unique anthology presents the largest collection of these tales ever assembled. Featuring beautiful illustrations by Glynnis Fawkes, this one-of-a-kind anthology will delight readers.

WILLIAM HANSEN is professor emeritus of classical studies and folklore at Indiana University, Bloomington.
The Fate of Rome

_The Fate of Rome_ is the first book to examine the catastrophic role that climate change and infectious diseases played in the collapse of Rome's power. Interweaving a grand historical narrative with cutting-edge climate science and genetic discoveries, Kyle Harper traces how the fate of Rome was decided not just by emperors, and barbarians but also by volcanic eruptions, climate instability, and bacteria. A poignant reflection on humanity's intimate relationship with the environment, this book provides a sweeping account of how one of history's greatest civilizations ultimately succumbed to the cumulative burden of nature's violence.

KYLE HARPER is professor of classics and letters and senior vice president and provost at the University of Oklahoma.

The Open Sea

In _The Open Sea_, J. G. Manning offers a major new history of economic life in the Mediterranean world in the Iron Age. Drawing on a wide range of ancient sources and the latest social theory, Manning suggests that a search for an illusory single “ancient economy” has obscured the diversity of lived experience in the Mediterranean world. At the same time, he shows how the region's economies became increasingly interconnected during this period. A groundbreaking economic history of the ancient Mediterranean world, _The Open Sea_ shows that the origins of the modern economy extend far beyond Greece and Rome.

J. G. MANNING is the William K. and Marilyn M. Simpson Professor of History and professor of classics at Yale University.
There is a yawning absence of work on ancient—or modern—oligarchs and oligarchy. That gap is now triumphantly filled by Matthew Simonton’s brilliant book.”
—Paul Cartledge, author of Democracy: A Life

Classical Greek Oligarchy

Classical Greek Oligarchy thoroughly reassesses an important but neglected form of ancient Greek government, the “rule of the few.” Matthew Simonton challenges scholarly orthodoxy by showing that oligarchy was not the default mode of politics from time immemorial, but instead emerged alongside, and in reaction to, democracy. The book argues that oligarchs designed distinctive political institutions—such as intra-oligarchic power sharing, targeted repression, and rewards for informants—to prevent collective action among the majority population while sustaining cooperation within their own ranks.

MATTHEW SIMONTON is assistant professor of history in the School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies at Arizona State University.

In Search of the Phoenicians

The Phoenicians traveled the Mediterranean long before the Greeks and Romans, trading, establishing settlements, and refining the art of navigation. But who these legendary sailors really were has long remained a mystery. In Search of the Phoenicians delves into the ancient literary, epigraphic, numismatic, and artistic evidence for the construction of identities by and for the Phoenicians, ranging from the Levant to the Atlantic, and from the Bronze Age to late antiquity and beyond. A momentous scholarly achievement, this book also explores the prose, poetry, plays, painting, and polemic that have enshrined these fabled seafarers in nationalist histories from sixteenth-century England to twenty-first century Tunisia.

JOSEPHINE QUINN is associate professor of ancient history at the University of Oxford and a fellow of Worcester College.

The Dancing Lares and the Serpent in the Garden

The most pervasive gods in ancient Rome, lares, had no traditional mythology attached to them, nor was their worship organized by elites. In this comprehensive and richly illustrated book, the first to focus on these cheerful little dancing gods, Harriet Flower offers a strikingly original account of these gods and a new way of understanding the lived experience of everyday Roman religion. Weaving together a wide range of evidence, this is the first major account of the full range of lares worship in the homes, neighborhoods, and temples of ancient Rome.

HARRIET I. FLOWER is professor of classics at Princeton University.

Pantheon

In this ambitious and authoritative book, Jörg Rüpke provides a comprehensive and strikingly original narrative history of ancient Roman and Mediterranean religion over more than a millennium—from the late Bronze Age through the Roman imperial period and up to full-fledged Christianization. With its unprecedented scope and innovative approach, Pantheon is an unparalleled account of ancient Roman and Mediterranean religion.

JÖRG RÜPKE is vice-director and permanent fellow in religious studies at the Max Weber Center for Advanced Cultural and Sociological Studies at the University of Erfurt, Germany, and has been a visiting professor at the Collège de France, Princeton University, and the University of Chicago.

The Atlas of Ancient Rome

provides a comprehensive archaeological survey of the city of Rome from prehistory to the early medieval period. Lavishly illustrated throughout with full-color maps, drawings, photos, and 3D reconstructions, this magnificent two-volume slipcased edition features the latest discoveries and scholarship, with new descriptions of more than 500 monuments. It is destined to become the standard reference for anyone interested in the history of the city of Rome.

ANDREA CARANDINI is professor emeritus of archaeology at La Sapienza, University of Rome.

Classical Art

How did the statues of ancient Greece wind up dictating art history in the West? How did the material culture of the Greeks and Romans come to be seen as “classical” and as “art”?
What does “classical art” mean across time and place? In this ambitious, richly illustrated book, art historian and classicist Caroline Vout provides an original history of how classical art has been continuously redefined over the millennia as it has found itself in new contexts and cultures.

CAROLINE VOUT is Reader in Classics at the University of Cambridge and a Fellow of Christ’s College.

“[A]n ambitious, highly original, and timely book. It is a sophisticated contribution to art history, classics, classical archaeology, and classical reception studies, and will be essential reading for scholars in all these fields.”

The Science of Roman History

This book provides the first comprehensive look at how the latest advances in the sciences are transforming our understanding of ancient Roman history. Walter Scheidel brings together leading historians, anthropologists, and geneticists, who together explore novel types of evidence that enable us to reconstruct the realities of life in the Roman world. Opening a path toward a genuine biohistory of Rome and the wider ancient world, The Science of Roman History offers an accessible introduction to the scientific methods being used in this exciting new area of research, as well as an up-to-date survey of recent findings and a tantalizing glimpse of what the future holds.

WALTER SCHEIDEL is the Dickason Professor in the Humanities, Professor of Classics and History, and a Kennedy-Grossman Fellow in Human Biology at Stanford University.

“A readable and quirky history of economic inequality from the great apes to the modern day. . . . It is well worth the read. It is, in a word, gripping.”
—Victoria Bateman, Times Higher Education

The Great Leveler

Are mass violence and catastrophes the only forces that can seriously decrease economic inequality? To judge by thousands of years of history, the answer is yes. Tracing the global history of inequality from the Stone Age to today, Walter Scheidel shows that inequality never dies peacefully. He identifies and examines these processes, from the crises of the earliest civilizations to the communist revolutions of the twentieth century. An essential contribution to the debate about inequality, The Great Leveler provides important new insights about why inequality is so persistent—and why it is unlikely to decline anytime soon.
A delightful and accessible foray into an enduring, relevant art.

How to Win an Argument

How to Win an Argument gathers the rhetorical wisdom of Cicero, ancient Rome’s greatest orator, from across his works and combines it with passages from his legal and political speeches to show his powerful techniques in action. The result is an enlightening and entertaining practical introduction to the secrets of persuasive speaking and writing—including strategies that are just as effective in today’s offices, schools, courts, and political debates as they were in the Roman forum.

JAMES M. MAY is a widely recognized expert on Cicero and classical rhetoric and has written and edited many books on these topics. He is professor of classics, the Kenneth O. Bjork Distinguished Professor, and former provost and dean at St. Olaf College.

“...The introduction is graceful, the translations are accurate and readable, the annotations are nicely judged, and the epilogue ... is indispensable.”

—Robert A. Kaster, Princeton University

How to Die

Seneca (c. 4 BC–65 AD) counseled readers to “study death always,” and took his own advice, returning to the subject again and again in all his writings, yet he never treated it in a complete work. How to Die gathers in one volume, for the first time, Seneca’s remarkable meditations on death and dying. Edited and translated by James Romm, How to Die reveals a provocative thinker and dazzling writer who speaks with a startling frankness about the need to accept death or even, under certain conditions, to seek it out. Featuring beautifully rendered new translations, How to Die also includes an enlightening introduction, notes, the original Latin texts, and an epilogue presenting Tacitus’s description of Seneca’s grim suicide.
"An important book that offers a very sound answer to a major question about ancient Roman religion."
—Greg Woolf, University of London

The Peace of the Gods

Using current theories in psychology, sociology, and anthropology, as well as cultural and literary studies. Craige Champion focuses on what the elites of the Middle Republic (ca. 250–ca. 100 BCE) actually did in the religious sphere, rather than what they merely said or wrote about it. The result offers rich new insights into the role of religion in elite Roman life.

CRAIGE B. CHAMPION is professor of ancient history and classics in the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University.

Christianizing Egypt

This book offers a new model for envisioning the process of Christianization by looking at various social and creative worlds active in Egyptian culture during late antiquity. Drawing on sermons and magical texts, saints’ lives and figurines, letters and amulets, and comparisons to Christianization elsewhere in the Roman empire and beyond, Christianizing Egypt reconceives religious change.

Greek Art and Aesthetics in the Fourth Century

Taking into consideration developments in style and subject matter, William A. P. Childs argues that Greek art in this era was a natural outgrowth of the high classical period and focused on developing the rudiments of individual expression that became the hallmark of the classical in the fifth century.

Ladies’ Greek

Why did Victorian women of letters desire to learn ancient Greek? Mediating between professional philology and the popularization of classics, these passionate amateurs became an important medium for classical transmission. The first comparative study of Anglo-American Hellenism, Ladies’ Greek opens up new perspectives in the study of classical reception, translation, and gender.
