The City-State of Boston

A groundbreaking history of early America that shows how Boston built and sustained an independent city-state in New England before being folded into the United States

In the vaunted annals of America’s founding, Boston has long been held up as a “city upon a hill” and the “cradle of liberty” for an independent United States. Wrestling this iconic urban center from these misleading clichés, The City-State of Boston highlights Boston’s overlooked past and offers a pathbreaking new history of early America. Mark Peterson shows how this self-governing Atlantic trading center began as a refuge from Britain’s Stuart monarchs and how—through its bargain with slavery and ratification of the Constitution—it would lose integrity and autonomy as it became incorporated into the greater United States.

Peterson explores Boston’s origins in sixteenth-century utopian ideals, its founding and expansion into the hinterland of New England, and the growth of its distinctive political economy, with ties to the West Indies and southern Europe. By the 1700s, Boston was at full strength, with wide Atlantic trading circuits and cultural ties, both within and beyond Britain’s empire. After the cataclysmic Revolutionary War, “Bostoners” aimed to negotiate a relationship with the American confederation, but through the next century, the new United States unraveled Boston’s regional reign. The fateful decision to ratify the Constitution undercut its power, as Southern planters and slave owners dominated national politics and corroded the city-state’s vision of a common good for all.

Peeling away the layers of myth surrounding a revered city, The City-State of Boston offers a startlingly fresh understanding of America’s history.

“Mark Peterson’s story of the rise and fall of the city-state of Boston over nearly three centuries is a remarkable achievement. He has told the story in such a rich and extraordinary way that our understanding of Boston’s history will never again be the same.”
—Gordon S. Wood, Pulitzer Prize–winning historian and author of Friends Divided: John Adams and Thomas Jefferson
“A gem of a book…. [C]hallenges a raft of assumptions and brims with insight and provocation. Rodgers has always written intellectual history at its very best: learned, searching, and vital.”
—Jill Lepore, author of These Truths: A History of the United States

As a City on a Hill

“For we must consider that we shall be as a city upon a hill,” John Winthrop warned at New England’s founding in 1630. More than three centuries later, Ronald Reagan remade the passage into a timeless celebration of American promise. How were these words reinvented as a central statement of American identity and exceptionalism? Daniel Rodgers brings to life the ideas Winthrop’s text carried in its own time and the sharply different yearnings that have been attributed to it since.

"The Lost History of Liberalism is the most acute and careful account on the theme ever composed. Helena Rosenblatt’s accomplishment is thrilling, with self-evident implications for our own time of ideological strife.”
—Samuel Moyn, Yale University

The Lost History of Liberalism

The Lost History of Liberalism challenges our most basic assumptions about a political creed that has become a rallying cry—and a term of derision—in today’s increasingly divided public square. Taking readers from ancient Rome to today, Helena Rosenblatt traces the evolution of the words “liberal” and “liberalism,” revealing the heated debates that have taken place over their meaning.

HELENA ROSENBLATT is professor of history at the Graduate Center, City University of New York. Her many books include Liberal Values: Benjamin Constant and the Politics of Religion and Thinking with Rousseau: From Machiavelli to Schmitt.
“Sweeping, original, and erudite. Jacob’s lucidly written book exhibits a command of the source materials that few scholars can ever hope to aspire to, let alone attain.”
—Darrin M. McMahon, author of Happiness: A History

The Secular Enlightenment

This landmark book is a panoramic account of the radical ways that ordinary life began to change in the age of Locke, Voltaire, and Rousseau. Familiar Enlightenment figures share places with voices that have remained largely unheard, from freethinkers and freemasons to French materialists, anticlerical Catholics, pantheists, pornographers, readers, and travelers.

Margaret C. Jacob demonstrates how secular values and pursuits took hold of eighteenth-century Europe, spilled into the American colonies, and left their lasting imprint on the Western world.

MARGARET C. JACOB is Distinguished Professor of History at the University of California, Los Angeles. Her many books include The Radical Enlightenment and The First Knowledge Economy: Human Capital and the European Economy, 1750–1850.

“Specht’s wonderful and impressive research covers an enormous territory. Red Meat Republic will reshape historians’ approach to this important topic.”
—John Mack Faragher, author of Eternity Street: Violence and Justice in Frontier Los Angeles

Red Meat Republic

By the late nineteenth century, Americans rich and poor had come to expect high-quality fresh beef with almost every meal. Beef production in the United States had gone from small-scale, localized operations to a highly centralized industry spanning the country, with cattle bred on ranches in the rural West, slaughtered in Chicago, and consumed in the nation’s rapidly growing cities. Red Meat Republic tells the remarkable story of the violent conflict over who would reap the benefits of this new industry and who would bear its heavy costs.

“Fauvelle is a wonderful storyteller—his sophisticated narrative is intriguing, entertaining, and informative. No other book presents medieval Africa in this way.”—Gérard Chouin, College of William & Mary

The Golden Rhinoceros

From the birth of Islam in the seventh century to the voyages of European exploration in the fifteenth, Africa was at the center of a vibrant exchange of goods and ideas. Places like Ghana, Nubia, and Zimbabwe became the crossroads of civilizations, and African royals, thinkers, and artists played celebrated roles in the globalized world of the Middle Ages. The Golden Rhinoceros finally recognizes Africa’s important role in the Middle Ages, bringing this unsung era to life and providing a window into the historian’s craft.

[Anziska’s] combination of original research and personal fearlessness has produced one of the most compelling works of political and diplomatic history I have ever read…. [A] major contribution to the history of this conflict.”—Charles Kaiser, The Guardian

Preventing Palestine

How and why Palestinian statelessness persists are the central questions of Seth Anziska’s groundbreaking book, which explores the complex legacy of the peace agreement brokered by President Jimmy Carter. Combining astute political analysis, extensive original research, and interviews with diplomats, military veterans, and communal leaders, Preventing Palestine offers a bold new interpretation of a highly charged struggle for self-determination.

“A rich and innovative contribution to temporal studies and political history.”
—François Hartog, author of Regimes of Historicity: Presentism and Experiences of Time

Time and Power

This groundbreaking book presents new perspectives on how the exercise of power is shaped by different notions of time. Acclaimed historian Christopher Clark draws on four key figures from German history—Friedrich Wilhelm of Brandenburg-Prussia, Frederick the Great, Otto von Bismarck, and Adolf Hitler—to look at history through a temporal lens and ask how historical actors and their regimes embody unique conceptions of time.

CHRISTOPHER CLARK is the Regius Professor of History at the University of Cambridge. He is the author of The Sleepwalkers: How Europe Went to War in 1914, Kaiser Wilhelm II: A Life in Power, and Iron Kingdom: The Rise and Downfall of Prussia, 1600–1947.

“[A] short but devastating historiographical counter-blast.… [A]n important, proportionate, by turns angry and moving corrective.”
—Robert Gordon, Times Literary Supplement

The Italian Executioners

In this gripping revisionist history of Italy’s role in the Holocaust, Simon Levis Sullam presents an unforgettable account of how ordinary Italians actively participated in the deportation of Italy’s Jews between 1943 and 1945, when Mussolini’s collaborationist republic was under German occupation. Levis Sullam dismantles the seductive popular myth of italiani brava gente—the “good Italians” who sheltered their Jewish compatriots from harm. The result is an essential correction to a widespread misconception of the Holocaust in Italy. In collaboration with the Nazis, and with different degrees and forms of involvement, the Italians were guilty of genocide.

SIMON LEVIS SULLAM is associate professor of modern history at Ca’ Foscari University of Venice. His previous books include Giuseppe Mazzini and the Origins of Fascism.
“It is rare to encounter an extraordinary first book like this one: imaginative, completely original, and beautifully wrought with a convincing set of capacious arguments. It will require scholars to fundamentally rethink how we write . . . the international history of the mid-twentieth century.”
—Mark Philip Bradley, University of Chicago

The Interrogation Rooms of the Korean War

Traditional histories of the Korean War have focused on the thirty-eighth parallel, the line drawn in 1945 dividing the Korean peninsula. This book shifts the perspective from the boundaries of the battlefield to inside the interrogation room. Upending conventional notions of geographies of military conflict, Monica Kim shows how the Korean War became a fight not over territory but over human interiority and the individual human subject, forging the template for the US wars of intervention that would predominate during the latter half of the twentieth century and beyond.

MONICA KIM is assistant professor of history at New York University. She lives in New York City.

“Irrationality

It’s a story we can’t stop telling ourselves. Once, humans were benighted by superstition and irrationality, but then the Greeks invented reason. Discovering that reason is the defining feature of our species, we named ourselves the “rational animal.” But is this flattering story itself rational? In this sweeping account of irrationality from antiquity to today—from the fifth-century BC murder of Hippasus for revealing the existence of irrational numbers to the rise of Twitter mobs and the election of Donald Trump—Justin Smith says the evidence suggests the opposite. Illuminating unreason at a moment when the world appears to have gone mad again, Irrationality is fascinating, provocative, and timely.

JUSTIN E. H. SMITH is professor of the history and philosophy of science at the University of Paris 7—Denis Diderot. His books include The Philosopher: A History in Six Types (Princeton).
“Drawing on sources as diverse as archaeology, canon law, and social theory, Roy Flechner shifts our perspective on Patrick by situating him firmly within the broader context of the late Roman Empire, post-Roman Britain, and early medieval Europe.”
—Catherine McKenna, Harvard University

Saint Patrick Retold

Saint Patrick was, by his own admission, a controversial figure. Convicted in a trial in Britain and hounded by rumors that he settled in Ireland for financial gain, Patrick battled great odds before succeeding as a missionary. Saint Patrick Retold draws on recent research to offer a fresh assessment of Patrick’s travails and achievements. This is the first biography in nearly fifty years to explore Patrick’s career against the background of historical events in late antique Britain and Ireland.

“No Shadow of a Doubt is beautifully and engagingly written and draws on intimate knowledge about every aspect of this grand event.”—Dennis Lehmkuhl, California Institute of Technology

No Shadow of a Doubt

In 1919, British scientists led expeditions to Brazil and Africa to test Albert Einstein’s new theory of general relativity in what became the century’s most celebrated scientific experiment. Today, Einstein’s theory is scientific fact. Yet the effort to test it during a solar eclipse on May 29, 1919, has become clouded by myth and skepticism. Could Arthur Eddington and Frank Dyson have gotten the results they claimed? In this book, Daniel Kennefick provides a definitive answer, offering a comprehensive and authoritative account of how expedition scientists overcame war, bad weather, and equipment problems to make the experiment a triumphant success.

DANIEL KENNEFICK is associate professor of physics at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville. He is the author of Traveling at the Speed of Thought: Einstein and the Quest for Gravitational Waves and a coauthor of An Einstein Encyclopedia (both Princeton).
“Will help historians understand the complex social and ethnic battles of the past two centuries. An amazing book by an original and brilliant historian.”
—Antonio Feros, University of Pennsylvania

The Imperial Nation

Historians view the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries as a turning point when imperial monarchies collapsed and modern nations emerged. Treating this pivotal moment as a bridge rather than a break, Josep Fradera examines Great Britain, France, Spain, and the United States and asks how the history of monarchical empires shaped these new nations. Fradera pays particular attention to the relations between imperial centers and their sovereign territories and the constant and changing distinctions placed between citizens and subjects.

JOSEP M. FRADERA is professor of modern history at Pompeu Fabra University in Barcelona. He is the author of Colonias para después de un imperio and the coeditor of Endless Empire and Slavery and Antislavery in Spain’s Atlantic Empire.

“One of the shibboleths of traditional explanations for the rise of the West has been an emphasis on early modern European military prowess. Empires of the Weak effectively takes this argument apart, and brings to light its hopelessly Eurocentric blinders… [A]n excellent, important, and much-overdue book that will change your thinking about the early modern world.”—Sven Beckert, Harvard University

Empires of the Weak

What accounts for the rise of the state, the creation of the first global system, and the dominance of the West? The conventional answer is that superior technology, tactics, and institutions forged by Darwinian military competition gave Europeans a decisive advantage in war. In contrast, Empires of the Weak argues that Europeans actually had no general military superiority in the early modern era. J. C. Sharman demonstrates that the rise of the West was an exception in the prevailing world order.

J. C. SHARMAN is the Sir Patrick Sheehy Professor of International Relations in the Department of Politics and International Studies at the University of Cambridge and a fellow of King’s College.
“A significant book by a master historian. It represents the accumulated wisdom of a long career spent thinking deeply about the fundamental issues of human community.”—Dirk Moses, University of Sydney

Citizenship, Inequality, and Difference

This book offers a concise and sweeping overview of citizenship’s complex evolution, from ancient Rome to the present. Political leaders and thinkers still debate, as they did in Republican Rome, whether the presumed equivalence of citizens is compatible with cultural diversity and economic inequality. Frederick Cooper presents citizenship as “claim-making”—the assertion of rights in a political entity. What those rights should be and to whom they should apply have long been subjects for discussion and political mobilization.

FREDERICK COOPER is professor of history at New York University. His many books include Empires in World History and Citizenship between Empire and Nation (both Princeton).

“In its clear and unswerving insistence on race as a political category in need of a political history, [this book] represents a strong, original contribution to this most vexed and fraught of subjects.”
—David A. Bell, Princeton University

Race Is about Politics

Racial divisions have returned to the forefront of politics in the United States and European societies, making it more important than ever to understand race and racism. But do we? In this provocative book, acclaimed historian Jean-Frédéric Schaub shows that we don’t—and that we need to rethink the widespread assumption that racism is essentially a modern form of discrimination based on skin color and other visible differences. Built around notions of identity and otherness, race is above all a political tool that must be understood in the context of its historical origins.

JEAN-FRÉDÉRIC SCHAUB teaches at the School for Advanced Studies in the Humanities and Social Sciences (EHESS) in Paris. He also holds a Global Distinguished Professorship in the History Department of New York University.
“Erudite, original, and lively. Osterhammel defends the Enlightenment from the charge of Eurocentrism and portrays in sparkling detail its humane legacy of self-criticism and communication with other cultures.”
—Harry Liebersohn, author of The Travelers’ World: Europe to the Pacific

Unfabling the East

During the long eighteenth century, Europe’s travelers, scholars, and intellectuals looked to Asia in a spirit of puzzlement, irony, and openness. In this panoramic and colorful book, Jürgen Osterhammel tells the story of the European Enlightenment’s nuanced encounter with the great civilizations of the East, from the Ottoman Empire and India to China and Japan.

JÜRGEN OSTERHAMMEL is professor of modern and contemporary history at the University of Konstanz. “John Tolan is the preeminent authority on European views of Islam. No living scholar is more qualified to attempt such an ambitious project. This book represents a milestone in the field.”
—Hussein Fancy, University of Michigan

Faces of Muhammad

In European culture, Muhammad has been vilified as a heretic, an impostor, and a pagan idol. But Western commentators have also portrayed the Prophet of Islam as a visionary reformer and an inspirational leader, statesman, and lawgiver. In Faces of Muhammad, John Tolan provides a comprehensive history of these changing, complex, and contradictory visions. The book shows that Muhammad wears so many faces in the West because he has always acted as a mirror for its writers, their portrayals revealing more about their own concerns than the historical realities of the founder of Islam.

This will be, I am confident, the definitive work on the most important development in international relations of the postwar period.”—Philip Bobbitt, author of The Shield of Achilles: War, Peace, and the Course of History

The Final Act

The Helsinki Final Act was a watershed of the Cold War. Signed by thirty-five North American and European leaders in 1975, it presented a vision for peace based on common principles and cooperation across the Iron Curtain. This is the first in-depth account of the diplomatic saga that produced this historic agreement. Drawing on research in eight countries and multiple languages, this gripping book explains the Final Act’s emergence, the strategies of the major players, and the conflicting designs for international order that animated the negotiations.

“One of the great British historians of our time reinterprets U.S. history from a truly global perspective, showing how the formation and international rise of the United States was entwined with processes of imperial expansion and global integration. This is a game-changing book that reveals as never before how the United States has fit into global patterns of historical change and development.”

—Jay Sexton, author of The Monroe Doctrine: Empire and Nation in Nineteenth-Century America

American Empire

American Empire presents a bold new global perspective on the history of the United States. Drawing on his expertise in economic history and the imperial histories of Britain and Europe, A. G. Hopkins takes readers from the colonial era to today to show how, far from diverging, the United States and Western Europe followed similar trajectories throughout this long period.

Racial Migrations
Jesse Hoffnung-Garskof

“Offers a rich reconstruction of a vibrant and little-known world of black activism and intellectual production. Giving readers access to important history through interconnected stories, Racial Migrations is beautifully written.”
—Alejandro de la Fuente, Harvard University

Racial Migrations

In the late nineteenth century, a group of Cubans and Puerto Ricans of African descent settled in the tenements of New York City. They became poets, journalists, and revolutionaries; built a political network; and articulated an ideal of revolutionary nationalism centered on the projects of racial and social justice. A model of transnational and comparative research, this book reveals the complexities of race-making within migrant communities and the power of small groups of immigrants to transform their home societies.

JESSE HOFFNUNG-GARSKOF is professor of history, American culture, and Latina/o studies at the University of Michigan. He is the author of A Tale of Two Cities: Santo Domingo and New York after 1950 (Princeton).

Gateway State

This book explores Hawai‘i’s development as a model for liberal multiculturalism and a tool of American global power in the era of decolonization. The establishment of Hawaiian statehood in 1959 was a watershed moment, not only in the ways Americans defined their nation’s role on the international stage but also in the ways they understood the problems of social difference at home. It heralded the emergence of postwar multiculturalism, which was a response both to independence movements abroad and to the limits of civil rights in the United States. As excitement over statehood dimmed, the utopian vision of Hawai‘i fell apart, revealing how racial inequality and U.S. imperialism continued to shape the state—and igniting a backlash against its white-dominated institutions.

The Presidency of Barack Obama

Barack Obama’s election as the first African American president seemed to usher in a new era, and he took office in 2009 with great expectations. But by his second term, Republicans controlled Congress, and, after the 2016 presidential election, Obama’s legacy and the health of the Democratic Party itself appeared in doubt. In The Presidency of Barack Obama, Julian Zelizer gathers leading American historians to put President Obama and his administration into political and historical context.

“With its focus on how the Bible was able to serve as a pivotal agent of cultural influence in the early national period, Perry’s groundbreaking study provides much-needed theoretical and methodological templates for all those interested in studying the power of sacred texts in given historical moments.”
—Paul Gutjahr, Indiana University

Bible Culture and Authority in the Early United States

Early Americans claimed that they looked to “the Bible alone” for authority, but the Bible was never, ever alone. This book is a wide-ranging exploration of the place of the Christian Bible in America in the decades after the Revolution. Attending to both theoretical concerns about the nature of scriptures and to the precise historical circumstances of a formative period in American history, Seth Perry argues that the Bible was not a “source” of authority in early America, as is often said, but rather a site of authority: a cultural space for editors, commentators, publishers, preachers, and readers to cultivate authoritative relationships.

Votes for Women

Marking the centenary of the ratification of the Nineteenth Amendment in 1920, Votes for Women is the first richly illustrated book to reveal the history and complexity of the national suffrage movement. For nearly a hundred years, countless American women fought for the right to vote. While some of the leading figures of the suffrage movement have received deserved appreciation, the crusade for women’s enfranchisement involved many individuals, each with a unique story to be told. Weaving together a diverse collection of portraits and other visual materials—including photographs, drawings, paintings, prints, textiles, and mixed media—along with biographical narratives and trenchant essays, this comprehensive book offers a more complete picture of American women’s suffrage, one that sheds new light on the movement’s relevance for our own time.

Artists Respond

By the late 1960s, the United States was in a pitched conflict in Vietnam, against a foreign enemy, and at home—between Americans for and against the war and the status quo. Artists Respond shows how American artists responded to the war from 1965 to 1975. This powerful book brings together works by many of the most visionary and provocative artists of the period. It explores how the moral urgency of the Vietnam War galvanized American artists in unprecedented ways, challenging them to reimagine the purpose and uses of art and compelling them to become politically engaged on other fronts, such as feminism and civil rights. The book presents an era in which artists struggled to synthesize the turbulent times and participated in a process of free and open questioning inherent to American civic life. Illustrated in color throughout, Artists Respond features a broad range of art, including painting, sculpture, printmaking, performance and body art, installation, documentary cinema and photography, and conceptualism.

—Hunter Heyck, author of Herbert A. Simon: The Bounds of Reason in Modern America and Age of System Creatures of Cain

After World War II, the question of how to define a universal human nature took on new urgency. Drawing on a wealth of archival materials and in-depth interviews, Erika Lorraine Milam charts the rise and precipitous fall in Cold War America of a theory that attributed man’s evolutionary success to his unique capacity for murder.

A wide-ranging account of a compelling episode in American science, Creatures of Cain argues that the legacy of the killer ape persists today in the conviction that science can resolve the essential dilemmas of human nature.

Jefferson’s Legal Commonplace Book

As a law student and young lawyer in the 1760s, Thomas Jefferson began writing abstracts of English common law reports. Even after abandoning his law practice, he continued to rely on his legal commonplace book to document the legal, historical, and philosophical reading that helped shape his new role as a statesman. This volume is the first to contain the complete text of Jefferson’s notebook. With more than nine hundred entries, this is a fascinating chronicle of the evolution of Jefferson’s searching mind.

This edition features a verified text of Jefferson’s entries and full annotation, including essential information on the authors and books he documents. It also includes a substantial introduction that places Jefferson’s text in legal, historical, and biographical context.

In the spring of 1820, following congressional discussion leading to the Missouri Compromise, Jefferson writes that the debate, “like a fire bell in the night, awakened and filled me with terror,” and that with regard to slavery, Americans have “the wolf by the ear, and we can neither hold him, nor safely let him go.”

Talaat Pasha (1874–1921) led the triumvirate that ruled the late Ottoman Empire during World War I and is arguably the father of modern Turkey. He was also the architect of the Armenian Genocide. Here is the first biography in English of the revolutionary figure who not only prepared the way for Atatürk and the founding of the republic in 1923, but who shaped the modern world as well.

“The Age of Questions

In the early nineteenth century, the age of questions began. In the Eastern and Belgian questions, as much as in the slavery, worker, social, woman, and Jewish questions, figures such as Alexis de Tocqueville, Victor Hugo, Karl Marx, Frederick Douglass, Fyodor Dostoevsky, Rosa Luxemburg, and Adolf Hitler saw not interrogatives to be answered but problems to be solved. This book tracks the question form, its trajectory, and the excitement it provoked for over a century.

A Sacred Space Is Never Empty

When the Bolsheviks set out to build a new world in the wake of the Russian Revolution, they expected religion to die off. The Soviet Communist Party used a variety of tools to turn its vision of a world without religion into reality. Yet it never succeeded in creating an atheist society. This book explores the meaning of atheism for religious life, for Communist ideology, and for Soviet politics.

—Arietta Papaconstantinou, University of Reading

Christian Martyrs under Islam
How did the medieval Middle East transform from a majority-Christian world to a majority-Muslim world? This book examines how violence against Christians ended the age of porous religious boundaries and laid the foundations for more antagonistic Muslim-Christian relations in the centuries to come.

With vivid portrayals of lesser known characters and some striking archival photographs, Gyan Prakash has given us a thoughtful and superbly readable account of one of Indian democracy’s darkest episodes.” —Partha Chatterjee, Columbia University

Emergency Chronicles

On June 25, 1975, Indira Gandhi declared a state of emergency in India, suspending constitutional rights and rounding up her political opponents in midnight raids across the country. In the twenty-one harrowing months that followed, her regime unleashed a brutal campaign of coercion and intimidation. Emergency Chronicles provides the first comprehensive account of this understudied episode in India’s modern history and places the Emergency within the broader global history of democracy.

The Killing Season

This book explores one of the largest and swiftest, yet least examined, instances of mass killing and incarceration in the twentieth century—the shocking antileftist purge that gripped Indonesia in 1965–66, leaving some five hundred thousand people dead and more than a million others in detention. An expert in modern Indonesian history, genocide, and human rights, Geoffrey Robinson sets out to account for this violence and to end the troubling silence surrounding it. In doing so, he sheds new light on broad and enduring historical questions. The Killing Season makes a powerful contribution to wider debates about the dynamics and legacies of mass killing, incarceration, and genocide.

GEOFFREY B. ROBINSON is professor of history at the University of California, Los Angeles. Before coming to UCLA, he worked for six years at Amnesty International’s Research Department in London.

A Local History of Global Capital

Before the advent of synthetic fibers and cargo containers, jute sacks were the preferred packaging material of global trade and the second-most widely consumed fiber in the world, after cotton. This book traces how jute bound the Bengal delta’s peasantry to turbulent global capital, and how global commodity markets shaped everyday peasant life.

The Promise and Peril of Credit

By the close of the Middle Ages, new credit instruments such as bills of exchange made it easier for European merchants to move funds across the globe. Francesca Trivellato recounts how the invention of these abstruse credit contracts was falsely attributed to Jews, and how this story gave voice to deep-seated anxieties surrounding the rise of impersonal credit markets.

“Fills a critical gap in the history of India’s Constitution…. A fabu- lous, rich, and humorous account of how ordinary people interpreted and shaped the Constitution from below, this is truly a people’s history.”—Nandini Sundar, Delhi University

A People’s Constitution

It has long been contended that the Indian Constitution of 1950, a document in English created by elite consensus, has had little influence on India’s greater population. Drawing upon the previously unexplored records of the Supreme Court of India, this book upends this narrative and shows how the Constitution actually transformed the daily lives of citizens in profound and lasting ways.

“A fine economist with a keen eye for historical facts and episodes, Silber analyzes the economics and politics that determined the value of silver and its role in monetary systems and asset markets.”
—Thomas J. Sargent, Nobel Laureate in Economics

The Story of Silver

Because it is cheaper than gold, silver has been the preferred shelter against government defaults, political instability, and inflation for most people in the world. It has also seduced sophisticated investors throughout the ages. This is the story of silver’s transformation from soft money during the nineteenth century to hard asset today, and how manipulations of the white metal by American president Franklin D. Roosevelt during the 1930s and by the richest man in the world, Texas oil baron Nelson Bunker Hunt, during the 1970s altered the course of American and world history.

“The financial history of the Russian Revolution has been largely neglected for a century, despite the importance of banks and bondholders as targets, and indeed victims, of the Bolshevik Revolution. Hassan Malik’s deeply researched and vividly written study … is an original and illuminating contribution to a literature that has devoted far more attention to the revolutionaries than to the capitalist system they overthrew.”
—Niall Ferguson, Milbank Senior Fellow, Hoover Institution, Stanford

Bankers and Bolsheviks

Following an unprecedented economic boom fed by foreign investment, the Russian Revolution triggered the worst sovereign default in history. Bankers and Bolsheviks tells this dramatic story, chronicling the forgotten experiences of leading financiers of the age. The book demonstrates how the realms of finance and politics grew increasingly intertwined, and how investing in Russia became a political act with unforeseen repercussions.

HASSAN MALIK is an investment strategist and financial historian. He was a postdoctoral fellow at the European University Institute in Florence and the Institute for Advanced Study in Toulouse.
TITLES IN THE PRINCETON ECONOMIC HISTORY OF THE WESTERN WORLD seek to explain the full range of Western economic development in all of its facets: the transformation of medieval Europe from a rural to a capitalist economy; the institutions that marked the European revolutions, the demographic transition, and the changes they wrought on daily life; the rise of the modern capitalist economies; and the role that technology, commercial expansion, and the international division of labor played in fueling their growth throughout the West and the world.
“A wonderful book, as rich in human sympathy and historical empathy as in scrupulous archival revelation.”

The Apple of His Eye

The military expeditions of King Louis IX of France against Islam are well documented, but there was also a peaceful side to his encounter with the Muslim world. This book shines new light on the king’s program to induce Muslims to voluntarily convert to Christianity and resettle in France, recovering a forgotten episode in the history of the Crusades while providing a window into the converts’ own experiences.

“Through close examination of the Catholic devotion known as ‘Our Lady of Loreto’ and its spread... this wonderful and moving book offers a compelling case that Catholicism’s expansion was not just accomplished by force, but much more often occurred through the agency of people who survived chaotic events and accidental journeys.”

The Miraculous Flying House of Loreto

“A frontal assault on traditional assumptions about early Islam. [Tannous’s] absorbing and persuasive exercise in microhistory ... presents us with a continuing Christian Middle East until at least the eleventh century.”—Averil Cameron, University of Oxford

The Making of the Medieval Middle East

In the second half of the first millennium CE, the Christian Middle East fractured into competing churches and Arabs conquered the region, setting in motion a process that would lead to its eventual conversion to Islam. Jack Tannous argues that key to understanding these dramatic transformations are ordinary religious believers.

“A very significant contribution to the history of the human sciences, statistics, and eugenics.”
—Staffan Müller-Wille, coauthor of A Cultural History of Heredity

Genetics in the Madhouse

In the early 1800s, a century before there was any concept of the gene, physicians in insane asylums began to record causes of madness in their admission books. Almost from the beginning, they pointed to heredity as the most important of these causes. As doctors and state officials steadily lost faith in the capacity of asylum care to stem the terrible increase of insanity, they began emphasizing the need to curb the reproduction of the insane. Genetics in the Madhouse is the untold story of how the collection and sorting of hereditary data in mental hospitals, schools for “feebleminded” children, and prisons gave rise to a new science of human heredity.

“Feke makes the original and historically important argument that Ptolemy ascribed to mathematics the same role that philosophy had in the Hellenistic era—to show the way to the good life.”

Ptolemy’s Philosophy

The Greco-Roman mathematician Claudius Ptolemy is one of the most significant figures in the history of science. He is remembered today for his astronomy, but his philosophy is almost entirely lost to history. This groundbreaking book is the first to reconstruct Ptolemy’s general philosophical system—including his metaphysics, epistemology, and ethics—and to explore its relationship to astronomy, harmonics, element theory, astrology, cosmology, psychology, and theology.

A compelling work of scholarship, Ptolemy’s Philosophy demonstrates how Ptolemy situated mathematics at the very foundation of all philosophy.

Scouting and Scoring

Scouting and scoring are considered fundamentally different ways of ascertaining value in baseball. Scouting seems to rely on experience and intuition, scoring on performance metrics and statistics. Christopher Phillips rejects these simplistic divisions, showing how both scouts and scorers rely on numbers, bureaucracy, trust, and human labor in order to make sound judgments about the value of baseball players.
