“Ambitious and beautifully written. . . . An impressive contribution.”

—Joya Misra, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

Making Motherhood Work

The work-family conflict that mothers experience today is a national crisis. Women struggle to balance breadwinning with the bulk of parenting, and stress is constant. Social policies don't help. Of all Western industrialized countries, the United States ranks dead last for supportive work-family policies. Can American women look to European policies for solutions? Making Motherhood Work draws on interviews that sociologist Caitlyn Collins conducted over five years with 135 middle-class working mothers in Sweden, Germany, Italy, and the United States. She explores how women navigate work and family given the different policy supports available in each country.

CAITLYN COLLINS is assistant professor of sociology at Washington University in St. Louis. Her work has been covered by the Atlantic, NPR, and the Washington Post.

“At once intelligent, sophisticated, and accessible, there is no other book that tackles the same themes.”

—Nattavudh Powdthavee, Warwick Business School and author of The Happiness Equation

Love, Money, and Parenting

Parents everywhere want their children to be happy and do well. Yet how parents seek to achieve this ambition varies enormously. Why? Love, Money, and Parenting investigates how economic forces and growing inequality shape how parents raise their children.

Doepke and Zilibotti discuss how investments in early childhood development and the design of education systems factor into the parenting equation, and how economics can help shape policies that will contribute to the ideal of equal opportunity for all.

This book presents an engrossing look at the economics of the family in the modern world.

MATTHIAS DOEPKE is professor of economics at Northwestern University. FABRIZIO ZILIBOTTI is the Tuntex Professor of International and Development Economics at Yale University.

“A remarkably coherent treatment that will appeal to novices and advanced analysts alike. There is no other book quite like this.”
—Thomas J. Leeper, London School of Economics

Data Visualization

This book provides students and researchers a hands-on introduction to the principles and practice of data visualization. It explains why some graphs succeed while others fail, how to make high-quality figures from data using powerful and reproducible methods, and how to think about data visualization in an honest and effective way. Includes a library of data sets, code, and functions.

Taken for Granted

Offering a revealing and provocative look at the word choices we make every day without even realizing it, this book exposes the subtly encoded ways we talk about race, gender, sexual orientation, religion, social status, and more. Zerubavel shows how the tacit normalizing of certain identities, practices, and ideas helps to maintain their cultural dominance—including the power to dictate what others take for granted—and in the process unsettles the very notion of normality.

EVIATAR ZERUBAVEL is Board of Governors and Distinguished Professor of Sociology at Rutgers University.

The Left Behind

Drawing on over a decade of research and hundreds of interviews, Robert Wuthnow brings us into America's small towns, farms, and rural communities and demonstrates that to truly understand rural Americans' anger, their culture must be explored more fully. Moving beyond simplistic depictions of the residents of America's heartland, he offers a clearer picture of how this critical population will influence the nation's political future.

Uneasy Street

Rachel Sherman draws on rare in-depth interviews with affluent New Yorkers to upend images of wealthy people as invested only in accruing and displaying social advantages for themselves and their children. Instead, these liberal elites feel conflicted about their position in a highly unequal society. Uneasy Street not only explores the real lives of those at the top but also sheds light on how extreme inequality comes to seem ordinary and acceptable to the rest of us.

RACHEL SHERMAN is associate professor of sociology at the New School for Social Research and Eugene Lang College.

Masters of Craft

In today’s new economy, many well-educated and culturally savvy young people are pursuing traditionally low-status manual labor occupations as careers. Masters of Craft looks at the renaissance of bartending, distilling, barbering, and butchering, and provides new insights into the stratification of taste, the spread of gentrification, and the evolving labor market in today’s postindustrial city.

The Manhattan Nobody Knows

Bill Helmreich walked every block of New York City to write the award-winning The New York Nobody Knows. Now he has re-walked most of Manhattan—721 miles—to write this new, one-of-a-kind walking guide. Drawing on hundreds of conversations he had with residents during his block-by-block journey, The Manhattan Nobody Knows highlights hundreds of facts, places, and points of interest that you won’t find in any other guide.

Each neighborhood section features a brief overview and history; a user-friendly map keyed to the text; and a guided walking tour.

WILLIAM B. HELMREICH is Distinguished Professor of Sociology at the City College of New York’s Colin Powell School for Civic and Global Leadership and at CUNY Graduate Center.

“Quite simply ... one of the best books ever written on courts, criminal or otherwise.”—Malcolm M. Feeley, author of The Process Is the Punishment: Handling Cases in a Lower Criminal Court

Misdemeanorland

Felony conviction and mass incarceration attract considerable media attention, yet most criminal-justice encounters are for misdemeanors, and most do not lead to prison. Focusing on policing in New York City, this book shows how the lower reaches of our criminal justice system operate as a form of social control and surveillance, often without adjudication or formal punishment.

The Spectre of Race

Michael G. Hanchard argues that exclusionary policies have always been central to democratic practices. Offering important historical context for how democracy generates political difference and inequality, Hanchard discusses how marginalization is reinforced in modern politics, and why these contradictions need to be fully examined if the dynamics of democracy are to be truly understood.

—Barbara Kiser, Nature

The Tyranny of Metrics

Organizations of all kinds are ruled by a tyranny of metrics—the belief that the path to success is quantifying human performance, publicizing the results, and dividing up the rewards based on the numbers. Muller uncovers the damage our obsession with metrics is causing—and shows how we can begin to fix the problem.

Two Cheers for Higher Education

Headlines suggest that universities' power to advance knowledge and shape society is rapidly declining. But Steven Brint has tracked numerous trends demonstrating their vitality. Brint offers not only a clear-eyed perspective on the current state of American higher education but also a pragmatically optimistic vision for the future.

STEVEN BRINT is Distinguished Professor of Sociology and Public Policy at the University of California, Riverside.

December 2018. 448 pages. 21 b/w illus. 21 tables.
